

ALOHA from Burma (Myanmar)

March 3, 2004

Guess what the above picture is. It's a romantic work place in a cool February evening. Dr. Sher Kler Law (the middle), Naw Say Paw (far left) and I worked while the electricity was out. Thanks to the laptop I got, we were able to work with the help of candlelight romantically. Eating La Pet (pickled tea) and drinking Chinese tea while listening to Killing Me Softly by Fugees. ☺ The following is the picture with the flash from the camera so you can see us. Dr. Sher Kler Law is the medical officer from the Karen Baptist Clinic, a clinic for the poor.

Naw Say Paw and I have been volunteering for the fund raising of the clinic. We were sending e-mails to volunteers in the U.S.

Electricity has been terrible lately. We have blackouts all the time. Many days, we sit idle at school because there is no electricity. Kind of like relaxing, talking to friends with no productivity.

I will be traveling all over Burma starting from March 7 till the end of April. I will have lots of stories to tell when I come back. Till then, please pray for me because I will be working with several churches and Baptist organizations around the country, teaching them computers and speaking at several places.

May God bless you!

Love in Christ,

Lwin Moe
